AND SPANKED HIM, WHEN NAUGH-TY, AS IF HE WERE HIS OWN.

When Mr. Buve Is Arrested at Mrs. Ander. son's Instance, Ris Defence Is that She Is Not a Pit Person to Have the Child, Little seven-year-old Alfred Anderson has caused trouble between two persons. One of them is his mother, Mrs Mary Anderson of Canarsie, L. I., and the other is Augustus Duve of 165 East Thirty-first street, with whose wife the child has been living, off and on, for the past year and a half. The trouble came to a climax yesterday morning, when Mrs. Ander-son had Duve arraigned in the Yorkville Police Court and charged him with keeping her son as hostage for a $50 board bill owed by his father,

The Andersons have been married for about is five years of age. About two years ago Anerson, it is said, deserted his family, coming to this city, where he found employment in a ent to board with the Duves, who then lived on East Twenty-fourth street. He hadn't been ere very long when he returned to Canarale took a fancy to the lad and kept him for some months, treating him, so she says, as if he were becown child. She felt particularly lonesome at that time because her husband was in Europe, and she had no children of her own.

Last August Mrs. Anderson came and got the boy and took him home with her, but before he had been long with his mother Mrs. Duve went down to Canarsie and persuaded Mrs. Anderson to let Alfred come back to New York with her. said she would keep him well, as her husband had returned from abroad, and she was living in a comfortable flat on East Thirty-first living in a comfortable flat on East Thirty-first street. Anderson was no longer living with the Duves, but was living, so it was said, with some woman in East Eighty-fourth street.

Mrs. Anderson, so she said in court, consented to let Mrs. Duve have the boy for a month. Last Wednesday she determined to take the boy home with her for the holidays. She went to the Duves and stayed two days, during which, she says, she saw things that made her think that the Duves were treating Alfred too much as their own property, for he called Mrs. Duve "Auntie," and several times Mr. Duve applied the slipper to the child for what Mrs. Anderson considered trivial oflences.

Finally, on Friday, she announced her intention of going home and taking the boy with her. Then, according to her story, the Duves came out flat footed and said she could not have the boy until a board bill of $50 which her husband owed to the Duves had been paid. Mrs. Anderson protested against such a thing, as she had nothing to do with her husband. The Duves were firm, however, and they took the boy away from her by force. Then, while she was arguing with Mrs. Duve, she heard, she said, cries of pain and sounds of blows come from the other room where the child was with Mrs. Duve's husband.

Earaged at this treatment of her son, she pain and sounds of blows come from the other room where the child was with Mrs. Duve's husband.

Enraged at this treatment of her son, sie went to Justice McMahon at the Yorkville Court, and by his advice had summonses issued against the Duves, ordering them to come to court with the child. These she was unable to serve, and Monday she went to the Gerry society and toid her story. By the advice of Agent Wilson she swore out the warrant against Duve on which he was arrested and locked up.

The Duves tell a very different story. They say that when Anderson first brought the boy to them, shortly after he left his wife, he told Mrs. Duve that his wife was not a fit person to care for the child, and asked her to take care of him. This she did to the best of her ability, sending him to school and buying him good clothes. He stayed with her almost continually for a year and a half, Mrs. Duve says, being visited from time to time by his mother, who fully approved of Mrs. Duve keeping him, as she lived with a married sister who had no room for him. After Anderson had left the Duves to live with the Eighty-fourth street woman, he once came and got the boy, but Mrs. Duve went the next day and brought him back.

Mrs. Duve denies that she kept the boy on account of his father's board bill, but she did it, she says, because Anderson didn't want his wife to have him. As for the abuse, she says that of course the boy was spanked once in a while, as all boys should be. She says the chief reason that she was unwilling to let Mrs. Anderson had the thild.

Three hundred men and boys crowded close up to the little shanty at the end of the East wenty-third street pier near noon yesterday. In the little shanty a young man stood in a big rubber suit, to which there were attached three tubes. The young man had the end of one tube in his mouth, a big policeman had the end of another, and the owner of the shanty had the end of the third, and all three were blowing into the tubes harder than the big for a fat boy's job. He came out of the shanty then and looked at the crowd. He dragged after him a pair of blue boats and announced himself as the champion water walker of the world, introducing the boats as shoes.

Peieg, the boatman who sells fish to passing canal boats, was halled, and the water walker clambered down to the boat and declared he was going to walk over to the Navy Yard. The crowd howled at him. Peleg pulled out a few feet from shore and the young man lifted his boats overboard and floated them. Then while Peleg steadied him he stepped into them.

"Whoop!" howled the crowd as the young man stethed torward, and "Whoop" as he pitched backward. Then he straightened up and steadied himself with a paddle Peleg handed him.

"Ladies and gentlemen." said the young man. "I shall now have great pleasure in giving an exhibition of my great power at water walking."

With that he shoved one boat forward. The other one slipped back in spite of him. He was just on the point of parting in the middle when a little wave came along and shoved the first foot back.

"Now, ladies and gentlemen," said the young that the wavelets are high, but in spite of this fact i will now—"

There was a swash. The hind leg had slipped again and the young man did a split. For a moment he sat and then just as he was going to speak again over he went, and he guiped down a galton or so of sait water. The wind in the suit kept him from sinking. His boats came off and he floated out into the river, the crowd yelling after him. A tugboat was passing and he clambered aboard. The boatman grabbed the blue boats and pulled them aboard. Then he rowed under the pier. The cabman dropped on his stomach and peered over the stringpiece. "Gi'me me money!" yelled Peleg.

"Gi'me me money!" yelled Peleg.

"Gi'me me money!" yelled Peleg, and then he rowed away, blue boats and all.

It was half an hour later and the crowd had gone when a black body floated around the end of the pier. It was the champion water walker. He sald he had jumped off the tug at Ninetseath street and had swam back. He stormed at a great rate. He wanted to know what good a water walker was without shoes to walk in. But the shoes were gone, and after getting Peleg's name he went off. He was seen later at a dime museum, sitting among the freaks and with a tank of water by his side. He wore his rubber suit. He looked disconsoiate.

"I'll have the law on him," he said. "Oh, I'll pay him back!"

On Sunday morning the officers of the steamer, thinking that the fire had been got under control, continued on the voyage to Liverpool, but during the aftersoon the fire again gained headway, and the steamer once more turned toward this port.

The extent of the fire is thought to be considerable, owing to the difficulty experienced in keeping it within bounds. The cargo in the forward compariment of the steamer will have to be discussed in order to reach the fire.

Count Rudolph Festetics de Toina married an American lady of great beauty and many dueats, and the young married couple, having a strong passion for the blue and briny, had a splendid steam yacht constructed for their use—regardless of expense—the Toina, built expressly for the Pacific Ocean. Here a hitch arose. The Count, being a foreigner, could not command a vessel built in the United States. The Countess quickly decided to surmount the difficulty in a somewhat novel fashion. She forthwith began studying navigation, and passed after a short time such a briliant examination that she at once received the diploma of a captain for long voyages. She is expected to arrive with her husband and ship in a short time at Marseilles.

A CIVIL COURT ROBBED.

The Burgiars Get Only Pens, Pencils, and Stationery. When Clerk Julius Harburger of the Fourth District Civil Court went to his office in the Florence building at Second avenue and First street yesterday morning he was surprised to find that the office had been forced open by burglars during the night and thoroughly ransacked. The lock was torn from the door, and all of the closets and drawers in the room had been forced open, evidently with a jimmy. An effort had been made to break open the old-fashioned safe in the office, but the burglars were evidently poor workmen, and did not suc-ceed.

Further investigation on the part of Mr. Har-burger showed that the burgiars had also forced the doors of the court room and the Judge's room up stairs. The only booty which the rob-bers got was a lot of stationery, including all the pens and pencils. It was a bad time of the year to rob the office, as most of the stationery for 1894 was used up and the requisition for 1895 stationery had not been filled.

WHISKEY TRUST AFFAIRS.

The Company Issues Its Proposed Plan of Reorganization.

PEORIA, Ill., Dec. 18,-The directors of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding Company issued their statement to the stockholders of the company to-day. After calling attention to the efforts of the Board of Directors to take advantage of the increased tax, the circular calls attention to the fact that their customers became restive and threatening at the failure to pay the tax on all of the product, and the embarrassing position in which the trust found itself is noted, and the circular continues;

It is difficult to estimate the amount of additional working capital that will be required. First, we will need at least $500,000 additional to operate the plants; second, it will require at least $1,000,000 additional capital to distribute our product in the Eastern territory; third, the amount required to cancel the leases of idle properties is difficult to estimate, but the money for that purpose must be provided.

" Plan 1-Organize a new company under the laws of any State considered most suitable, with a capital stock of $10,500,000; $3,500,000 of which to be preferred seven per cent. stock, and $7,000,000 of common stock; the stockholders of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding Company to subscribe for the preferred stock at the ratio of one share preferred stock for every ten shares D. and C. F. stock held, paying for the same $50 per share cash at the time the organization of the new company is completed and $50 per share to be payable in installments at such times as rebe payable in installments at such times as required and called for by the directors; one share of the common stock of the new company to be given to subscribers of the preferred stock for live shares of D, and C. F. stock held by them.

"As soon as the new company is fully organized the Distilling and Cattle Feeding Company can convey to it all the operating plants and all the other property, real and personal, which can be utilized in connection with the proper conduct of the business and the new company in consideration of the conveyance can assume the payment of the $1,000,000 bonds outstanding, as well as the payment of other liabilities, except phon leases of idle and useless properties, which should be excepted from the conveyance. After completing the reorganization adismissal of the appeal to the Supreme Court of the quo warranto suit can be had, which will leave the judgment of ouster in the lower court in effect, and this will require a liquidation of the affairs of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding Company.

"To supmanzize the plan of reorganization, as ompany. "To summarize the plan of reorganization, as stated:

"First—It would furnish the requisite working capacity without any sacrifice to the stockholders.

"Second—It would terminate the leases on the idle properties on a basis that could not be otherwise reached.
Third—It would place the new company on a sound financial basis, enabling it to conduct its affairs on strict and economical principles, producing and distributing its goods at a minimum cost.

"Plan 2-Substantially the same as plan 1. excepting as to the manner of subscribing for the preferred stock, viz.: The stockholders of the Distilling and Cattle Feeding Company to subscribe for $2,100,000 of preferred stock at par, at the ratio of six shares preferred stock for each 100 shares of Distilling and Cattle Feeding Company stock held, the balance of the $1,400,000 preferred stock to be held as Treasuper's stock."

$1,400,000 preferred stock to be held as Treasurer's stock.

"Plan 3—Reduce the present capital stock to $10,000,000, each stockholder to be asked to surrender his stock and accept one share of paid-up stock for every five shares he now holds; that $3,000,000 new common stock be issued, and that two shares of paid-up stock be issued to each subscriber for $100 paid in the Distilling and Cattle Feeding stockholders to have the preference in subscribing for the same, or in other words, of payment for each share of stock an additional share be given.
